The image shows a large grid of Chinese characters arranged in 10 rows and 10 columns. The first column contains the character '髮' (hair), and the second column contains the character '長' (long). The characters are written in a clear, black, sans-serif font. Each character is enclosed within a light gray rectangular box, which is itself situated within a larger white square. The grid is designed to provide a structured environment for practicing the stroke order and placement of these specific characters.
